

Washington Examiner Magazine, digital edition: In-depth features, top columnists, policy coverage, weekly video from editor - CLICK HERE

Digital Magazine Log In | Subscribe

Monday, July 16, 2018

Every Illinois student deserves a great education | DonorsChoose.org

RED ALERT POLITICS The Right Take on Campus

University professor spray-paints fake blood on an NRA member's house

by John Patrick | May 29, 2018 12:50 PM

In response to the incident, Patricia Hill was subsequently arrested and charged with destruction of property.

(Daniel Acker/Bloomberg)

A university professor in Nebraska has been found guilty of misdemeanor destruction of property after vandalizing an NRA lobbyist's home in Alexandria, Va., earlier this year.

According to prosecutors, Patricia Hill, an assistant professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's sociology department, was caught spray-painting fake blood on the home of NRA lobbyist Chris Cox by security cameras.

In response to the incident, Hill was subsequently arrested and charged with destruction of property. As punishment for her crimes, Hill will be forced to pay a $500 fine.

In addition to the fine, Hill was also slapped with a temporary restraining order to prevent her from further harassing the Cox family until a civil case against her is heard later this summer. The judge has ordered Hill to stay 500 feet away from the Cox residence and also issued a temporary order of protection against Hill that prevents her from harassing or engaging in behaviors that could harm or cause

Hugo's Corner

Watch Full Screen to Skip Ads

distress to Cox.

In response to Hill's punishment for harassing Cox and his family, another professor from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln defended Hill's actions, complaining that it was wrong for Cox to press charges against Hill.

"Cox has the nerve to cry to the courts because someone allegedly put a harmless red substance [on his steps]," said Amanda Gailey, a professor in the English department, who also serves as the president of Nebraskans Against Gun Violence.

Gailey is no stranger to controversy that involves the harassment of conservatives. Gailey recently garnered media attention for harassing students associated with the UNL chapter of Turning Point USA when she challenged them to add her to their watchlist of crazy, liberal professors. Gailey has also made vicious and defamatory posts about police officers on her Facebook.

Show us what's happening on your campus by tweeting pictures and video with the hashtag #RedAlert

Red Alert PoliticsNRATeachersGun Control

Share your thoughts with friends.

Ads by Revcontent

Sponsored Content

Max Baer Jr. Accidentally Let Slip What Had Happened on 'Beverly Hillbillies'

CelebHour

Redheads Rule, and Here Are 20 Reasons Why

Livestly.com

Md: if You Wear Glasses Do This Immediately

Outback Vision Protocol

Vintage Photos That Captured More Than Expected!

90skidsonly

Illinois Born Before 1986? Government Will Pay Your Mortgage!

Finance Daily

One Simple Method Ends Tinnitus, Try This Today!

Ring Ease

The Weekly Standard Top Stories

Trump Blames America First

Danger and Duty in Helsinki

One Woman's Battle Against Mandatory Hijab

Tariffs Aren't the Best Weapons in a Trade War

Curb the Power of Shady Proxy Advisory Firms!

More Washington Examiner

GOP lawmakers endorse fake program to train young kids with guns on Sacha Baron Cohen show

About Examiner Magazine Archive Staff Advertise Contact

Subscribe Terms Of Use Facebook Twitter

Copyright 2018. Washington Examiner. All Rights Reserved.